BRYAN CELEBRATES 48TH ANNIVERSARY

Silver-Tongued Orator Of The Democracy Spends Birthday In Chicago.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Chicago, Ill., March 19.—William J. Bryan, twice the candidate of the Democratic party for President of the United States and in race track parlance, "the one best bet" for the nomination against this year, spent his forty-eighth birthday in Chicago today. Mr. Bryan is here to speak at a meeting in the Seventh Regiment armory tonight, which will mark the formal opening of the Democratic campaign in Chicago. The demonstration has been arranged by the Bryan League, of which former Mayor Carter H. Harrison is the head. During the day word was passed around that this was Mr. Bryan's birthday and for several hours the distinguished Nebraska man kept busy receiving the good wishes of friends and admirers.

Though it is now nearly twelve years since he received his first nomination for the highest office in the land, Mr. Bryan is still a comparatively young man. He is in the prime of vigorous manhood and well qualified physically to stand the strain of the coming campaign. Twelve years of almost constant travel and speech-making have made no visible inroads on his physical resources.

He is now in the city of the Democracy next July. Mr. Bryan intends to start at once on a strenuous campaign that will equal if not eclipse his wonderful record already established in this direction. Mr. Bryan is the originator of the whirlwind campaign.

Mr. Bryan's speaking campaign of 1896 lasted approximately four months and there were on an average 25 campaigning days in each month. In this campaign he made more than 2,100 speeches, short and long. During the last three months of the campaign he was making 20 speeches in a single day. Sometimes the number ran as high as 35 for the day. But at the end of the campaign Mr. Bryan appeared as if at the start.

Four years later he entered his second whirlwind campaign and, as he would say, he was in the pink of condition. His first big effort was his speech of acceptance made in Indianapolis on a day so hot that many persons were overcome in the crowd. With such a beginning, Mr. Bryan proceeded to break his speech-making record of the first campaign. On one occasion, working westward from St. Louis, he made his first speech of the day at 5 o'clock in the morning and his last at midnight, which meant an almost continuous performance of 19 hours. And his midnight speech was said to have been made with all the vigor of a man who had made no previous public appearance during the day.

MURDERER OF FIVE TO DIE TO MORROW

Herman Bilik Will Pay Penalty of His Crime on the Gallows Friday.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Chicago, Ill., March 19.—Tomorrow is the day fixed for the execution of Herman Bilik, whose alleged crimes are without parallel in the criminal records of Chicago, unless it be in the case of "Blackbeard" (John) the arch-murderer. H. H. Holmes. Notwithstanding the fact that the Supreme Court has affirmed the verdict of the trial court, friends of Bilik are still hopeful that he may escape the noose. Plans for executive clemency have been made, based on the alleged confession of one of the principal witnesses against Bilik that he had lied on the stand and had been coached in his story by the police.

The crime for which Bilik was given the death penalty was the alleged murder of Mrs. Mary Vrzal, Martin Vrzal, husband of the woman, was a milk vendor, living with his family in West Nineteenth street. When he met Bilik in the summer of 1904 Bilik informed Vrzal that a rival milk vendor was his enemy and offered to cast a spell that would protect Vrzal from harm. Vrzal agreed, and a potion of white fluid was brewed on the Vrzal stove and strewn across the gateway of the Demosy home across the way. For this service Bilik accepted a loan.

Shortly afterward Vrzal became ill and Bilik administered medicine to him. Vrzal suffered from symptoms resembling the effects of arsenic poisoning and died in a few days. The following July Mary Vrzal, the oldest daughter, visited Bilik and told him she was ill. He gave her medicine and she died from arsenic poisoning. In rapid succession the deaths of other members of the family followed. All had been insured for small amounts which had been collected by Mrs. Vrzal. The police learned that through "charms" and other methods Bilik had obtained more than $5,000 from the Vrzal family.

On December 5, 1906, Mrs. Vrzal was taken suddenly ill and died. The death that was pronounced a natural death had been in the room with her prior to her death and had given her medicine. He was arrested and placed on trial July 2. The bodies of the Vrzal family had been exhumed, and all were found to contain arsenic. Jerusalem Vrzal and Edmund Vrzal, nieces of Mrs. Vrzal, were the principal witnesses against Bilik. He was convicted and the death penalty fixed by the jury on July 18. He was sentenced to hang in October last, but twice was reprieved. The case was carried to the Supreme Court, which affirmed on February 22 affirmed the verdict.

BARNUM AND BAILEY OPEN IN NEW YORK

Only One Time Honored Feature Is Missing From the List of Prodigious.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
New York, March 19.—The latest and most reliable sign that spring has come was furnished by the opening of the circus in Madison Square Garden today. "Bigger and better than ever before," the historic Barnum & Bailey show, now under the control of the Ringling Brothers, will hold forth in the big amphitheater during the next two weeks. In all its essential features it is the same old circus, with sawdust and thump, clowns and riders and animals without number. Only one time-honored feature is missing from the list. There are no giants, dwarfs, bearded ladies, living skeletons or tattooed men this year. The circus people say the public has tired of freaks, and so the old circus tent has been converted into a garden filled with cages of rare birds and animals.

FLIP THE COIN FOR A CAPTAIN'S OFFICE

Manner in Which Selection Is Made for Important Position at University.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., March 19.—Flipping a coin for the election of captain of a university athletic team is a novelty, but such an incident determined the election held here yesterday for captain of the University of Wisconsin basketball team for the coming year, and Helmer Swenholm of Madison won over Earl Stehm of Milwaukee. Two attempts had been made by the squad to elect a captain, and each time the vote was a tie, six and six. The voting squad was made up of six regulars and six substitutes. Each candidate for the captaincy was equally supported by regulars and substitutes and finally it was suggested that the men decide this question of superior sportsmanlike ability in a sportsmanlike manner, flip a coin and settle the election. "Twas agreed," Stehm called "tails" and "heads" turned up.

RECALLS A TRAGEDY OF YEARS LONG PAST

Selling of Coaching Lunch Recalls Old Memories to John Day of Madison.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., March 19.—The John Day, first aquatic coaching launch of the university, will soon pass into history. This boat was named for John Day of Janesville, who drowned in Lake Mendota in the spring of 1896. Unused and unnoticed, the old coaching launch has propped up at the side of the university boathouse. A gaping hole in her hull marks the place where a jagged rock crushed its way through; the old engine that propelled the vessel through the waves, rusty and old-fashioned, has been sold and the hull given away to be broken up. To take its place, the Cardinal has come, a sleek, clean, cut boat of the speed type, representing the very ideal of a coaching vessel, graceful and yet built with every accommodation and large enough to carry two full varsity eights. The one has outlived its destined years of usefulness and has been superseded by the other.

RECALLS A TRAGEDY OF YEARS LONG PAST

The passing of the John Day may be just an incident to the mind of any of the present day students in the university, but to the old grad, who was here a dozen years ago, it recalls one of the most appalling of Lake Mendota's long string of tragedies, a calamity which put the whole university into mourning, the drowning of John Day. It was after him the launch was named. On an April afternoon, 1896, John Day and C. C. McConville, two candidates for the varsity eight, started out in one of the pale-colored gigs which had been received just the day before. In the coxswain's seat was Pat O'Dea, probably the greatest pluckiest boater the west has ever seen. The course was to Picnic Point, a mile and a half from the university boathouse. When about halfway across, the coxswain was overtaken by a storm and their little craft began to fill with water. A large billow overturned the boat and threw the three men into the water. O'Dea, realizing that John Day could not swim, hauled him to the boat and held him to it until his own strength gave out and Day was washed away, just as help was almost within adding distance. His body was found on the following day.

RECALLS A TRAGEDY OF YEARS LONG PAST

The Ideal Athlete
John Day was known as "the ideal Wisconsin athlete." He was a sophomore at the time of his death and in the two years of his college career he had made a mark which prophesied a most brilliant record. He had rowed on the crew the year previous and in addition to being a wonderful oarsman, he was a track athlete of exceptional standing and promise. He was a student of high rank, the president of his class, a debater and orator and an all-around "good fellow." A student of high standing and a most exemplary young man. He was the only son of Mrs. Janet B. Day of Janesville.

When the first coaching launch was purchased in the fall of 1899, from the aquatic department of Harvard university, it was suggested that its name be changed from the John Harvard to the John Day and the suggestion met with approval. From 1899 until last year, the launch John Day supplied as best it could the needs of the bather on campus.

ANNUAL REPORT OF AM. TELEPHONE CO.

Shows That Nearly Four Million Stations Are Connected to the System.

In the annual report of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., which has just been issued and a copy of which has been received by District Manager B. A. Oliver of the Wisconsin branch, President Theodore N. Vall gives some interesting figures and discusses at length several features of the telephone business. The business has shown constant gain during the year, and at the close there were 3,839,000 stations connected to the system, with a total of 8,010,552 miles of wire. The total number of exchanges and toll calls for the year was about 5,987,000,000. During the year $52,921,400 was added to construction, and in the past eight years $351,835,625 has been so added. At the present time there are outstanding 1,525,380 shares of stock of the company, 1,312,502 of which are held by 23,453 stockholders, an average of less than 50 shares each, the balance, 212,778 shares, being held by 16 subscribers, each with 5,000 shares or over.

At the close of the year a valuation based on the replacement cost of the existing plant, without any allowance for franchises or for unearned increment, showed $488,295,000. Against this there were outstanding obligations of the American Telephone and Telegraph company and its associated companies, including capital stock at par in the hands of the public, of $65,899,000. These companies also had cash, bonds, notes, and investments of $101,074,000, so that the obligations against the plant were only $163,865,000, or $34,431,000 less than its appraised value. The book value of the exchange construction is $114 per exchange station, and the book value of all the property, including the long-distance lines, is $162 per station.

For the first time a statement of the operating companies (that is, those companies which directly furnish the telephone service) is given, with gross earnings for the whole country of $129,753,200, operating and general expense of $53,242,500, and maintenance of plant $34,665,700. The balance available for dividends amounts to $55,819,700, out of which dividends amounting to $19,206,100 were declared, which seems reasonable when the value of the plant is considered.

NEW YORK DEMMIES TO MEET NEXT MONTH

State Central Committee Picks April Fourteenth as the Date of Convention.

New York, March 19.—The democratic state committee today decided to hold the state convention in New York city April 14 and adopted a resolution recommending that the delegates to the national convention be instructed by the state convention;

IF FARMERS WILL CO-OPERATE THE
FAIR'S A SURE GO

Committee Appointed to Find Men to Sound The Sentiment And Offer
Stock In Every Township.

That the Janesville county fair at the very outset must take rank with the best in the state, was the proposition clearly outlined at the mass-meeting yesterday. James Scott and others insisted on this as the primary consideration and every other speaker agreed with him that no half-way undertaking, even as a starter, would be feasible under any possible circumstances. Mr. Scott said that there could be no question concerning the enterprise and generous support of the citizens of Janesville. They would do more than their share. The only question was: Can the farmers be persuaded to take hold of the project and help push it for all there is in it? He recalled an instance where he tried to sell some live-stock in Walworth county during a fair there and during a drive of forty miles, saw only one show running. The people had all turned out for the exhibition, the same united and loyal support would have to be secured here.

"Pull Together"—That's All.
The importance of the "pull-together" attitude as a condition precedent to any hopes of success was also emphasized by C. H. Putnam, the chairman, and Frank P. Starr. The latter suggested that prior to fair time committees should visit the farmers and personally solicit exhibits. The resources of Rock county as the third in valuation in the state were dwelt upon by this speaker. H. L. McNamara said that everyone in Janesville wanted to see the plan come to fruition and would do his part, but it must be known absolutely, beforehand, that the farmers are also in the procession.

South Part Of County In Line.
It is believed that this sentiment in favor of a fair in Janesville, but lightly shrouded in the country and can easily be awakened. J. H. Humphrey said that he had talked with people residing near Beloit, such men as William Weirick and Mr. Smith, both of whom were directly interested in the Beloit fair, now abandoned, and that they had said that they would be only too glad to assist in such a movement. William Jones thought he could safely give assurances that the east side of the county would do its part. The presence at the session of Robert E. Pyle, secretary of the Moravian farm near Beloit, was another indication.

Farmers Eager For The Track.
The discussion of a half-mile track was started by John Huculish of La-Prade, after he had secured his license and he was willing to take hold and do his part. In furthering the main idea. He thought that a smaller track would be much better for exhibition purposes. Chairman Putnam thought that with swing-gates a 550 yard stretch for the horses could easily be compassed and at a small expense. H. D. McKinney agreed that for exhibition purposes the half mile track would perhaps be preferable but was certain that the mile stretch was preferable for training purposes. And in this connection it was announced that horse owners at Mukawago and Madison had already made inquiries for permanent quarters here for their strings of horses, in case the track should be fixed up, and this would represent a source of permanent revenue to the association.

Committee Appointed.
The search for men who will put their shoulders to the wheel in every township has already commenced. Chairman Putnam has appointed as members of the committee to assist him in this work: J. B. Humphrey, James Scott, and W. H. Greenman. As soon as there are indications of a general co-operation on the part of the farmers, another big mass-meeting will be called. After that the project will begin to shape itself rapidly and the home-coming proposition which is to be joined with the fair will be broached and pushed. With the great stables of finest horses in Wisconsin located right within the city gates, the native talent of the people hereabouts to put an original touch and finish on any entertainments they undertake, and the vast variety and abundance of resources in every line which goes to make up a successful exposition, there can be no doubt about the permanent success of the undertaking.

The middle of March marks the natal day of two of the United States presidents. On March 16, 1791, was born that sturdy warrior, Andrew Jackson. On March 16, 1751, the beloved president, James Madison.

These two men have gone down in history as diametrically opposed in nearly every detail. Jackson was hot-headed, vindictive, a fighter and a man of indomitable will and courage. Madison, on the other hand, was sweet-tempered, mild, affectionate and a thorough statesman. The greatest point of resemblance in their lives was their great patriotism to the United States and their love for justice.

James Madison was the fourth president and held office from March 4, 1809, to March 4, 1817. He was a republican, born in Port Conway, Va. He completed his common school education and then went to the college of New Jersey, now known as Princeton, from which institution he was graduated in 1771. His college life must have been very active as he left a decided impression of his personality on the college. He founded a literary society, which still flourishes and boasts its origin. In many other ways also was his personality felt during his college career, and his influence left with generations which succeeded him. After leaving college he studied law and in 1775 was elected to a seat in the Virginia assembly. He became a member of the executive council in 1778 and was sent to Congress the following year.

In that body he continually opposed the issue of paper money by the states. He was active until the peace of 1783, when he retired to private life, but was drawn out again later as a delegate to the convention that framed the national constitution. In that body he took a prominent part in the debates and advocated the adoption of that instrument. As a member of congress from 1789 to 1797 Madison did much in the establishment of the nation on a firm foundation. Although united with the republican party, he was a moderate opponent of the administration of Washington. He declined the position of secretary of state, vacated by Jefferson in 1793, which Washington offered him. While in the Virginia legislature he presented resolutions to that body, drawn by himself, on the basis of a series drawn by Jefferson for the Kentucky legislature, which sustained the essence of the doctrine of state supremacy. In 1801 he accepted the appointment of secretary of state, which office he held until his inauguration as president. He very soon became involved in disputes about impressment with Great Britain and in 1812 was compelled to declare war against that nation. Retiring from office in 1817, he passed the remainder of his days on his estates at Montpelier. His accomplished wife, Dorothy, commonly called "Dolly," shared his joys and sorrows from the time of their marriage in Philadelphia in 1794 until his death in June, 1836. She was a long time among the leaders in Washington society.

Andrew Jackson's life presents one continual fight from the time he joined the revolutionary forces in South Carolina, at the age of 14 years, until his death. After the war he studied law and was admitted to practice in Western North Carolina in 1780. Four years later we see him in the United States attorney for that district. He was a member of the convention that framed the state constitution of Tennessee. In 1797 he was honored by election to the United States senate, but he resigned the position to accept a judgeship in the Tennessee supreme court the following year. During these years he was major-general of the Tennessee militia and conducted the principal campaign against the Creek Indians, which resulted in a complete subjugation of that nation in the spring of 1812. That same summer he was appointed major general in the regular army and given command of the department of the south. His victory at New Orleans the following January gave him great renown.

Jackson, like a true soldier, did not relax his vigilance after the victory that saved Louisiana from British conquest. He maintained martial law in New Orleans rigorously. When an official announcement of peace was received from Washington he was involved in a contention with the civil authorities who had opposed martial law as unnecessary. In the legislature of Louisiana was a powerful faction, opposed to him personally, and when the officers and troops were thanked by that body the name of Jackson was omitted.

A sedition proclamation soon appeared which increased the indignation of the people and as this was a public matter calculated to produce dissatisfaction in the army, Jackson caused the arrest of the author and his trial by martial law. Hall, of the supreme court of the United States, issued a writ of habeas corpus in favor of the offender. Jackson considered this a violation of martial law and ordered the arrest of the judge and his expulsion from the limits of the city. The judge in turn, when the martial law was revoked in consequence of the proclamation of peace, required Jackson to appear before him and show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of court. He cheerfully obeyed the summons and entered the crowded court room in citizen's dress. There was an immense crowd of agitated citizens and when recognized, he was greeted by a thousand voices. The judge hesitated. Jackson stepped upon the bench, procured silence and then turning to the trembling judge said: "There is no danger here; there shall be none. The same hand that protected this city against the invaders of the country will shield and protect this court or perish in the effort. Proceed with the sentence." The judge pronounced him guilty of contempt of court and fined him $1,000. This he immediately paid. The people were so anxious to show their appreciation of him and their disfavor with the court that they carried him out of the court house on their shoulders and raised the $1,000 for the fine by contribution, but this he refused to accept. Later congress refunded the sum with interest.

This incident shows perhaps more clearly than any other in his life his law-abiding desires and his determination to maintain the dignity and order of the courts. President Jackson possessed great firmness and decision of character; not always correct in judgment; often rash in expression and action; indeed sometimes by his hot anger into acts injurious to his reputation; of unflinching personal courage and a patriot of purest stamp. He retired from public life in the spring of 1837. His administration of eight years was marked by great energy, and never were the affairs of the republic in its domestic and foreign relations more prosperous than at the close of his term of office. He died in "The Hermitage," near Nashville, Tenn., June 8, 1845.

RUSSIAN GENERALS IN DEADLY COMBAT

SMIRNOFF PROBABLY FATALLY
WOUNDED BY FOCK.

ECHO OF COURT-MARTIAL

Memorandum by One Port Arthur Soldier, Questioning Bravery of the Other, Leads to Duel.

St. Petersburg, Mar. 19.—Lieut. Gen. Smirnov was probably fatally wounded in a duel fought here Wednesday with Lieut. Gen. Fock. The men met in the riding school of the Chevalier Guard regiment and fought with pistols, a distance of 20 paces separating them when the shots were exchanged. The duel was caused by the memorandum written by Gen. Smirnov on the sleeve of Port Arthur in which he questioned the courage of Gen. Fock. The latter considered that his honor and reputation were involved and challenged the author of the memorandum.

Details of the Duel.
The riding school was placed at the disposition of the combatants by the commander of the regiment, and the duel occurred with the full knowledge and approbation of the military authorities. It was witnessed by several officers of high rank, and it is even reported that several women were present. Generals Fock and Smirnov appeared at the riding school. Without saluting, they took the places assigned by their seconds. For Gen. Smirnov the seconds were his brother-in-law, Vladimir II. Puriakovich, a lieutenant of the duma, and Capt. Schultz, of the navy, while for Gen. Fock, Captain Sido, adjutant to Gen. Stoessel, and Lieut. Podgursky, one of the Port Arthur heroes, officiated.

Smirnov hit in Abdomen.
The distance between the two combatants was 20 paces, and the duellists were instructed to open fire at the word of command and continue until one or the other was killed. At Gen. Fock's fourth shot, Gen. Smirnov groaned and sank forward. He had been wounded in the abdomen above the right hip. He was carried in a litter to the military hospital, where doctors Wednesday afternoon employed Roentgen rays to locate the bullet. The word "fire" was given each time by Gen. Kireff, the Russian authority on duelling. At the second exchange Gen. Fock's coat was perforated. At the third exchange Gen. Smirnov accidentally fired prematurely, but Gen. Fock magnanimously declined to shoot at a defenseless opponent, and the fourth and final shots were then exchanged. This duel will be followed by another between Gen. Fock and Gen. Gorbatsky.

Brooklyn Woman Kills Self While Talking Over Wire.

New York, Mar. 19.—Miss Helen Duenzer, who conducted a school of instruction in embroidery and fine needlework in Brooklyn, shot herself to death Wednesday night in a telephone booth after summoning an acquaintance to care for her body. The report of the revolver and the dying groans of the suicide carried over the wire to the man who answered the call, but before he could reach the address given the woman was dead. Miss Duenzer was a handsome woman of 30 years and had a profitable business. She made her home with her mother and a brother. She was married a year ago, but three months after the wedding she separated from her husband. She lately complained of severe headaches.

New York, Mar. 19.—The last of the four tunnels of the Pennsylvania railroad under the East river was completed Wednesday night. THE ROUNDUP COLUMN.

West Has Something to Say About the Strenuous Game of Water Polo.

When Al Selbach played with the Washington club in the early nineties he was a quiet, steady fellow, with very little to say for quite awhile, as he seemed to be a little dazed by the surroundings. He went to Washington with that aggregation of stars which had previously made up the disbanded Chattanooga club, and some of the members of that team no man could ever forget.

One of the most celebrated characters composing this galaxy was Wild Bill Hassamer. Bill was quite a mixer while in the Capital City. He had always a pressing need for money, and he spent so much of it that he really couldn't keep himself arrayed in the newest suits of clothes.

Consequently the question of wearing apparel was a serious one with the versatile Mr. Hassamer, and he was constantly going to Al Selbach for advice, as Selbach had been a clerk in a Columbus (O.) clothing store.

Finally Al became bored a bit over Bill's frequent interrogations. When Hassamer approached him one day at the park and said to him, with a rueful cast of countenance, "I say, Al, can you tell me what to do to keep my pants from fringing around the bottom?" Selbach, with a grim look on his expressive face, cried: "Why, sure! All you have to do is to cut them off at the knees!"

No one pays any attention to the blind man's threat to whip another fellow on sight.

The feeling of slavery may be irksome. Still, the chains of the baseball magnate should not be so galling. If you were given your choice, would you prefer driving a team at $2.50 per day to being a baseball slave at $8,000 a year?

If you can remember the time when you were a youngster and the good mother in trying to give you a bath chased you all over the house with a sponge, which she eventually rubbed all over your face, then you've got the basic principle of water polo.

While according to the rules of the game one side is supposed to rub a ball on a big sign which has "Goal" painted on it, the main idea is to rub this ball in somebody's face, so he can't see what you are doing.

The fluency of the game consists of catching a fellow around the neck and holding him under the water until he has to turn loose the ball. The next man who gets it is treated to the same dose, and thus the fun proceeds until one side has outdistanced the other.

Speaking of the change in betting systems, it may be just as well to go to the inevitable finish along the old and familiar lines.

One advantage of a pitching machine is the delightful fact that it doesn't have to sign its name to a contract.

Arthur Kruger, the outfielder purchased from the Cincinnati Reds by Columbus, has signed his contract. Kruger has been wintering on the coast.

Helmie Hatch, the Brooklyn outfielder, has been released to the Rochester club in the Eastern league.

President George Ducey of the Boston Nationals evidently expects his team to draw big crowds this season. Four thousand seats have been added to the south end grounds.

The season's strike-out record is 301, made by Rube Waddell in 1903. After Rube gets through with the Athletics this year he promises a new record.

Rhody Wallace, shortstop of the St. Louis Americans, who has been holding out for his old war-time salary of $8,500 a year, has signed with the Browns at a reduced stipend.

Jimmy Sebring, recently connected with the National league, but last year with Wilmington, Del., has signed to play in the California outlaw league during the coming season.

Bryan rose to prominence over night. When the Democratic national convention convened in 1896 he was scarcely known nationally. He wrote the "silver plank" which formed the main issue in the '96 campaign. He made a brilliant speech before the convention and was nominated for the office of president of the United States. He had the support of a great many of the old-time Democrats and William Jennings Bryan on this his natal received 156 electoral votes against

THE GRAND JURY

Up at Madison a federal grand jury has been diligently at work for some days past investigating the failure of the bank at Ladysmith, and United States District Attorney W. G. Wheeler's actions in relation to the same. Some days ago a special grand jury was called to bring into prominence the particular features of the investigation of Mr. Wheeler's actions. The article, lengthy and covering every phase of the complaint drawn by disgruntled residents of Ladysmith, was printed in full and indirectly indicated that Mr. Wheeler had been guilty of wrongdoing. It was a cowardly attack made under the cover of the law. However, the grand jury yesterday took a step seldom made by a federal jury, and in a signed statement, which will be found in another column, completely exonerated Mr. Wheeler and not only did that but praised him for the efficiency of his work. It was a pretty compliment well deserved and one which Mr. Wheeler's friends will be glad to notice.

THE COUNTY FAIR

The initial steps have been taken for the establishing of a county fair in Janesville. The meeting held yesterday was filled with enthusiasm. The business men and farmers who were present were assured of the success of the project and the next thing to do is for every citizen to step up and do his share. It will be a big undertaking, but one worthy of the work needed to accomplish it. It should not be left to a few men to urge the rest to do their share, but all should unite in making it a success. When Janesville starts to do anything it usually does it so well that outsiders want it repeated for their benefit. When Janesville has a Fourth of July celebration visitors come from the surrounding country to enjoy its hospitality. It will be the same with the fair. It will bring thousands to the city, for Janesville has a reputation for entertaining that can not be beaten in the state.

LOCAL AFFAIRS

There are still a few days left before the primaries come. These days will doubtless be devoted by the candidates to hard campaigning. It is the voter who names the candidates for aldermen, for supervisor, for justice of the peace, for city attorney. It is up to the voter to exercise his rights of franchise. Local politics are complicated too often by ulterior motives of astute politicians who seek gain for themselves in even the election of a supervisor. What is necessary for the good government of the city is the selection of good, reliable business men for the offices. Janesville needs good firm hands at the helm of the city government and sentiment in naming the men you wish to represent you in the council or on the county board. The Gazette stands for good government. The men whose names are placed in nomination are for the most part good men and there is but little choice, but this choice should be carefully made on Tuesday next regardless of personal feeling. The best man for the office should be the slogan and the best man should be nominated.

THAT INTERURBAN

It really begins to look as though Janesville and Madison are to be united by the trolley lines at last. Talk for years has been that a line would be built. Many promoters have even secured franchises to build, but something always came to mar the effort at the last moment. Now steps are being taken to begin the initial work of building, the survey, and today a party of interested gentlemen representing a big Ohio corporation of interurban road-builders, are traveling over the route proposed with a team and carefully inspecting every possible point of vantage. It is probable that the road will be started this year at least and while perhaps not finished before fall it will be so well under way that there will be no question it will be running clear through before January 1, 1910.

WAVE OF REFORM

All over the country a wave of reform in the construction and conditions of the schools of the nation has swept, brought about by the awful Callinwood disaster. Little tots here were sacrificed, but their death may be the cause of saving the lives of thousands of others in consequence of the awakening to the conditions that disaster showed existed. In Janesville fire drills and special attention to the construction of the school buildings, the exits and the doors, insure safety for our pupils and it is to be hoped that when this recent disaster is almost forgotten, there will be no resumption of the old methods of laxity in preserving the safety of our pupils.

TAFT IN IOWA

It is with great satisfaction that it can be announced today that town has given a solid state delegation favorable to Secretary Taft for the presidential nomination. It is also comforting to know that Iowa has decided to again honor Senator Allison with renomination and re-election to the United States Senate. Iowa has redeemed itself and the days of the great reform appear to be over. Once in a while a state does assert itself in a manner which shows conclusively that it means business. This is the way with Iowa.

It would appear as though Secretary Taft is getting all the delegates for the republican nomination as fast as there is any possibility of his doing so. Good for "Bully" Taft. He is a big one, but he will keep the lid down at Washington all right.

Chicago thinks that perhaps Emma Goldman might do better than preach anarchism in its corporate halls. When the Ann Arbor students appear to want her presence so badly they destroy a theatre to impress the public they are not law-abiding citizens.

Perhaps Davidson was wiser than his generation when he refused to be a delegate at large on the La Follette ticket. Is it possible to read the handwriting on the wall, or did he just guess how it would be?

Would it not be a good thing for every booster in the city to start in and boom Janesville from now on? A pair of good boosters can do more good than a dozen knockers.

This proposition of a county fair is one which will bear inspection. It is safe to say that the proposition when fully understood will mean much to the citizens of Janesville and the immediate vicinity.

The old Rock river is booming along at a lively rate, but no one appears to notice it. Too busy with the spring politics.

Milwaukee is not so cocksure now that they have a gubernatorial candidate as they were some months ago.

An Unfortunate Accident.
A smart man put arsenic in a bottle of wine, hoping that a burglar would drink it, and his wife placed it among a hundred other bottles. The smart man is now wondering which is the bottle and is prepared to sell his stock of wine cheap.

DAY OF SPEECHES IN HOUSE.

Politics, Finance and the Trusts Receive Attention.

Washington, Mar. 19.—General debate on the pension appropriation bill continued for over four hours in the house of representatives Wednesday. The subjects discussed took a wide range, politics, finance, the trusts, and the president's last special message all receiving attention. Mr. House of Ohio predicted the election of Secretary Taft for president, while Mr. Hall of Tennessee in an arraignment of the Republican party appeared equally confident that William J. Bryan would be the successful candidate.

Messrs. Hardy of Texas and Waldo of New York discussed the currency question; Mr. Adair of Indiana inveighed against the trusts; Mr. Hatch, Indiana, saw no good in the president's sending messages to a congress which, he said, refused to act on his recommendations, while Mr. Heflin of Alabama uttered a bitter denunciation of the New York cotton exchange. At 4:24 p. m. the house adjourned out of respect to the memory of the late United States Senator William Pinkney Whyte of Maryland.

REMEMBER the sale continues through Friday and Saturday if the Silks (about 1000 yards) hold out. SAME OLD STORY: "The early bird" you know.

"What Do You Want When You Choose a Dentist?"

The very first, essential is "Good work."

"Any old thing" won't do when it comes to work in your mouth.

Another desirability is Painless work.

A careful, conscientious, painstaking operator like Dr. Richards uses every possible means at hand to avoid causing you pain.

A third feature which cuts quite a figure is "Reasonable Prices."

They say you can pay $5,000 for an automobile, or you can get a good serviceable machine for $1,000 if you wish. Some makers get far more than others for their output.

It is the same in Dentistry.

Some dentists prefer to do a small practice at large prices to each individual.

Others like Dr. Richards, prefer to do a large practice at a smaller fee from each patient.

Dr. Richards has fixed up many a decayed tooth for 75c, and sent the patient away so satisfied in every way that he has sent all his family and friends for their work.

Whereas he might have charged the man $3.00 and never seen him again.

Sum it up and you find it about this way—

"Good work"

"Painless work"

"Reasonable Prices."

SAYS STORY WAS UTTERLY FALSE

AND THAT GREAT WRONG HAS BEEN DONE SISTER AND HIMSELF.

STATEMENT BY R.A. WINSLOW

Made Immediately Upon His Arrival in Janesville This Afternoon in Full Denial of H. H. Giese's Assertions.

R. A. Winslow who has been given a great deal of unpleasant notoriety by reason of the statements made by H. H. Giese of Toledo, Ohio, upon his arrival here last week Friday, returned to Janesville from Minneapolis at three o'clock this afternoon. He emphatically denies each and all of the charges that have been made against him and the young woman who was known as his sister, characterizes them as prompted by malice and a desire to work a cruel wrong to both of them, and has submitted a statement of the case to the newspapers.

In justice to both of the parties concerned it should be said that not a few of the friends made here have resolutely stood by them from the outset of their trouble. The statement is as follows:

Editor Janesville Gazette, Janesville, Wis.

Dear Sir: Believing that the public is entitled to the real facts concerning the sensational rumors recently published in your paper and which have embarrassed my sister, myself, the company I represent, and others who have become associated with me in a social and business way, I desire to make the following statement that they may appreciate the unpleasant situation so unjustly and unreasonably forced upon myself and sister.

We were born and reared on a farm near Kalamazoo, Michigan, where we were well known, received a high school education and later attended Kalamazoo College. During a visit to Toledo in 1904 my sister met H. H. Giese and after a brief acquaintance married him and was a faithful and devoted wife. By her liberal education and financial assistance she made it possible for him to be accepted in the best society circles and become a successful business man. His cruel treatment of her finally developing to the point of brutality, made it impossible for her to live with him longer and she was forced by his "unmanly" treatment to leave him on Feb. 1st, seeking protection and aid from me, which it was my duty as her brother to give.

Mr. Giese and myself have never been on friendly terms for the reason that I opposed their marriage in the first place and have at times offered her advice and assistance. Giese's statement that he did not know, or had never seen me before, is false, and was inspired by his desire to force my sister into agreeing to release her dower interest in a home which they held jointly. Finding that it was impossible by this sort of underhanded tactics and malicious lies to accomplish his purpose in securing this release, he returned home. Mr. Giese, in the presence of my sister and myself, finally expressed regret at the course he had pursued and stated that he told the police that he had found her was in the wrong.

The statement that Mr. Giese is revenue collector at Toledo is untrue. His occupation is that of a bookkeeper. His conduct toward my sister became so unbearable that his name was absolutely distasteful to her and she desired to resume her maiden name. Divorce proceedings will be instituted at once by my sister on the grounds of cruelty and infidelity.

I make this statement, not because I feel that the malicious stories circulated by an unscrupulous man require any refutation, but because, I wish the many acquaintances and friends I have made in this locality to have immediate knowledge of the facts.

Yours respectfully,
R. A. WINSLOW.

BUY SAIL-BOAT ON LAKE KOSHKONONG

Fred Baker and Arthur Granger Purchased a New Boat from Edgerton.

Fred Baker and Arthur Granger yesterday closed the deal with Mr. W. Bentley of Edgerton by which they became owners of a fine sailboat called the Algonquin.

The boat, which is twenty-nine feet over all, is a class "A" boat of the style known as a "racer." It was built for the Sheridan Cup races held each year on Lake Geneva and afterwards when its owner, George Braun, became dissatisfied with its speed qualities it was sold to Mr. Bentley.

At the time it was built it was one of the finest boats on Lake Geneva and cost nearly a thousand dollars. It was constructed especially for racing and is copper-plated throughout, has two sets of sails, one of silk for racing and one of canvas, and the masts are hollow. With all sails set, including the balloon jib, the sail space is about one thousand square feet. The mainmast reach is 20 1/2 feet, the boom is 22 feet, and the gaff 12 feet, and the hull has a 12-foot base.

The boat is about five years old, now and was purchased by the present owners at a bargain. It is by far the fastest boat ever on Lake Koshkonong, and will be put in the water about May first.

THE MYSTERY

By STEWART EDWARD WHITE
And SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY M. CLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

The seals were now cowed and defenseless. It was a slaughter, and the most debauching and brutal I have ever known. I had hit out with the rest when it had been a question of defense, but from this I turned aside in a sick loathing. The men seemed possessed of devil and of their unhuman energy. Perdona could not hold the club and took to his natural weapon, the knife. I can see him yet rolling over and over and embracing a big cow, his head jammed in an ecstasy of ferocity between the animal's front flippers, his legs clasped to hold her body, only his right hand rising and falling as he plunged his knife again and again. She struggled, turning him over and under, wept great tears and fairly whined with terror and pain. Finally she was still, and Perdona staggered to his feet, only to stare about him drunkenly for a moment before throwing himself with a screech on another victim.

The nigger alone did not jump into the turmoil. He stood just down the cave, his club ready. Occasionally a disorganized rush to escape would be made. The nigger's lips curled and with a truly mad enjoyment he beat the poor animal's back. I pressed against the wall horrified, fascinated, unable either to interfere or to leave. After a little a tiny stream, growing each moment, began to flow past my feet. It sought its channel daintily, as streamlets do, feeling along the stones in eddies, quiet pools, miniature falls and rapids. For the moment I did not realize what it could be. Then the light caught it down where the nigger waited, and I saw it was red.

At first the racket of the seals was overpowering. Now gradually it was losing violence. I began to hear the blasphemies, ferocious cries, screams of anger hurled against the cave walls by the men. The thick, sticky smell grew stronger, as though it could not burn in that fetid air. A seal came and looked up at me, big tears rolling from her eyes. Then she slipped aimlessly away, out of her power with terror. The sight finished me. I staggered down the length of the black tunnel to the boat.

After a long interval a little three-months' pup waddled down to the water's edge, caught sight of me and, with a squeal of fright, dived far. Poor little devil! I would not have hurt him for worlds. As far as I know, this was the only survivor of all that herd. The men soon appeared, one by one, tired, sleepy-eyed, glugged, walking in a catlike trance of satiety. They were blood and fat from head to foot, and from drying red masks peered their bloodshot eyes. Not a word said they, but tumbled into the boat, pushed off, and in a moment we were floating in the full sunshine again. We "rowed" home in an abstraction. For the moment Berserker rage had burned itself out. Handy Solomon continually writhed his lips, like an animal licking his chops. Throckles stared into space through eyes dragged with killing. No one spoke.

We landed in the cave and were surprised to find it in shadow. The afternoon was far advanced. Over the hill we dragged ourselves and down to the spring. There the men threw themselves flat and drank in great gulps until they could drink no more. We built a fire, but the nigger refused to cook. "Some one else turn," he growled.

"I cook Acha's ship?" Perdona, who had hewed the fuel, sat once became angry. "I cut him do wood," he said. "I do my share. Eef I cut him do wood you must cook him do grub!" But the nigger shook his head, and Perdona went into an ecstasy of rage. He kicked the fire to pieces. He scattered the unburned wood up and down the beach. He even threw some of it into the sea.

"Eef you no cook him do grub you no hab my wood?" he shrieked, with enough oaths to sink his soul. Finally Pulz intervened. "Here, you foreigners," said he, "quit it! Let up, I say! We got to eat. You let that wood alone or you'll pick it up again!"

Perdona sprang at him with a screech. Pulz was small, but nimble, and understood rough and tumble fighting. He met Perdona's rush with two swift blows, a short arm jab and an uperent. Then they clinched and in a moment were rolling over and over just beyond the wash of the surf.

The row waked the nigger from his sullen abstraction. He seemed to come to himself with a start; his eye fell surprisedly on the combatants, then lit up with an unholy joy. He drew his knife and crept down on the fighters. It was too good an opportunity, to pay off the Mexican.

But Throckles interfered sharply. "Come off!" he commanded. "None of that!"

"Go to h—!" growled the nigger. A great rage fell on them all, blind and terrible, like that leading to the slaughter of the seals. They fought hitherhither, hitting at each other with fists and knives. It was difficult to tell who was against whom. The sound of heavy breathing, dull blows, the tear of cloth and grunts of punishment receded; the swirl of the sand, the heave of struggling bodies, all riveted my attention, so that I did not see Captain Ezra Selover until he stood almost at my elbow.

"Stop!" he shrieked in his high, falsetto voice. And would you believe it, even through the blood haze of their combat the men heard him and heeded? They drew reluctantly apart, got to their feet, stood looking at him through reeking brows half submerged and half defiant. The bulldozed Throckles even took a half step forward, but froze in his tracks when Old Scrubs looked at him.

"I hire you men to fight when I tell you to and only then," said the captain sternly. "What does this mean?" He menaced them one after another with his eyes, and one after another they quailed. Their plottings, their threats, their dangerousness disappeared like mist before the command of this one resolute man. These plotters who had seemed so dreadful to me now were nothing more than cowering schoolboys before their master.

And then suddenly to my horror I, watching closely, saw the captain's eye turn blank. I am sure the men must have felt the change, though certainly they were too far away to see it, for they shifted by ever so little from their first frozen attitude. The captain's hand sought his pocket, and they froze again, but instead of the expected revolver he produced a half full brandy bottle.

"The change in his eyes had crept into his features. They had turned foolishly amiable, vacant, confiding. 'This, boys,' said he appealingly. 'You good fellows, ain't you? Have a drink. A good stuff, good of both.' He lurching, caught himself and advanced toward them, still with the empty stare.

They stared at him for ten seconds, quite at a loss. Then:

"He's drunk!" Handy Solomon breathed, scarcely louder than a whisper.

There was no other signal given. They sprang as with a single impulse. One instant I saw clear against the waning daylight the bulky, foolish swaying form of Captain Selover, the next it had disappeared, carried down and obliterated by the rush of attacking blood. Knives gleamed rudely in the sunset. There was no struggle. I heard a deep groan. Then the murderers rose slowly to their feet.

CHAPTER XX.

I HAD plenty of time to run away. I do not know why I did not do so, but the fact stands that I remained where I was until they had finished Captain Selover. Then I took to my heels, but was soon cornered. I drew my revolver, remembered that I had emptied it in the seal cave and had time for no more coherent mental processes. A smothering weight hung itself on me, against which I struggled as hard as I could, shrinking in anticipation from the thrifty plunge of the knives. However, though the weight increased until further struggle was impossible, I was not harmed and in a few moments found myself, wrists and ankles tied, beside a roaring fire. While I collected myself I heard the grate of a boat being shoved off from the cave and a few moments later made out lights aboard the Laughing Lass.

The looting party returned very shortly. Their plundering had gone only as far as liquor and arms. Throckles let down from the cliff top a keg at the end of a line. Perdona and the nigger each carried an armful of the 30-40 rifles. The keg was rolled to the fire and bronched.

The men got drunk, wildly drunk, but not helplessly so. A flame communicated itself to them through the liquor. The ordinary characteristics of their composition sprung into sharper relief. The nigger became more sullen, Perdona more snake-like, Pulz more viciously evil, Throckles more brutal, while Handy Solomon, staggering from his seat to the open left and back again, roared fragments of a chanty, his red headgear contrasting with his smoky black hair and his swarthy look nosed countenance—he needed no further touch.

"Their evil passions were all awake, and the plan, so long indefinite, developed like a photographer's plate. 'That's one gone,' said Throckles. 'And now the diamonds,' muttered Pulz.

"There's a ship upon the windward, a wreck upon the lee. Down on the coast of the high barbarous—" roared Handy Solomon. "It's the best night's work we ever did. The stuff's ours. Then it's no for a big stone house in Frisco?"

"Trico!" sneered Pulz. "That's all you know. You ought to travel. Paris for me and a little girl to learn the language from."

"I get him a fine caballo an' fine saddle an' fine clo's," breathed Perdona sentimentally. "I ride and the silver jingle and the sonnet look!"

"What you want, doctor?" they demanded of the silent nigger.

But the nigger only rolled his eyes and shook his head. By and by he arose and disappeared in the dusk and was no more seen.

"D— fool!" muttered Handy Solomon. "Well, here's to crime!" He drank a deep cup of the raw rum and staggered back to his seat on the sands.

"I am not a man-o-war, nor a privateer," said he. "Blow high, blow low; what care we? But I am a jolly pirate, and I'm sailing for my feet."

"Down on the coast of the high barbarous—"

he sang. "We'll land in Valparaiso and we'll go every man his way, and we'll sink the old Laughing Lass so deep the mermaids can't find her."

Throckles piled on more wood, and the fire leaped high.

"Let's get after 'em," said he.

"Tomorrow's jest a good," muttered Pulz. "Let's have 'mother drink'."

"We'll stay here 'n see if our old friend Percy don't show up," said Handy Solomon. He threw back his head and roared forth a volume of sound toward the dim stars.

"Broadside to broadside the gallant ships did lay. Blow high, blow low; what care we? The jolly man-o-war shot the pirate's mast away. Down on the coast of the high barbarous—"

I saw near me a live coal dislodged from the fire when Throckles had thrown on the armful of wood. An idea came to me. I hitched myself to the spark and laid across it the rope with which my wrists were tied. This, behind my back, was not easy to accomplish, and twice I burned my wrists before I succeeded. Fortunately I was at the edge of the illumination and behind the group. I turned over on my side so that my back was toward the fire. Then rapidly I cast loose my ankle lashings. Thus I was free, and selecting a moment when universal attention was turned toward the rum barrel I rolled over a sand dune, got to my hands and knees and crept away.

To Gauge Flow of Well. To calculate the rate of flow of an artesian well a simple plan is to lower a bottle of molasses fluid to a depth of say 500 feet, and then electrically explode a cap to burst the bottle. The time required for the fluid to appear at the surface gives an accurate gauge as to the velocity of flow.

Doan's Kidney Pills are Indorsed in Janesville. No better proof of merit can be had. Here's a case of it. "We have plenty more like it."

Mrs. B. P. Jones, of 157 Western Ave., Janesville, Wis., says:

"I was not free from attacks of backache for a single day during several years past. I used so many remedies without getting any relief that I came to the conclusion that nothing would help me and stopped trying. I went about all bent over, could not straighten up at all and had a dull pain across the loins and a feeling of weakness that made it hard for me even to rise from a chair. At night I would awaken with the feeling that a great weight was breaking my back, and anyone who has suffered from kidney trouble will know what torture I endured. Finally I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and wondered if there was really any use of trying another remedy, but seeing them recommended by people in Janesville I procured a box at the People's Drug Co. and began using them. Gradually I regained strength and the pains and aches finally disappeared. Since I have discontinued their use I have not had an attack of backache nor any symptom of kidney trouble, and I believe Doan's Kidney Pills worthy of all the praise that I can give them."

Gentlemen: In 1891 I had a disease of the stomach and bowels. Some physicians told me I had Dyspepsia, some Consumption of the Lungs, others said consumption of the Bowels. One physician said I would not live until Spring, and for four long years I existed on a thin boiled milk, soda biscuits, doctors' prescriptions and Dyspepsia remedies that flooded the market. I could not digest anything I ate, and in the Spring 1902 I picked up one of your Almanacs as a poor emaciated creature and I was so glad to find that I was not alone in my suffering. I bought a bottle of KODOL DYSPEPSIA CURE and the remedy I received from that bottle ALL THE GOLD IN GEORGIA COULD NOT BUY. TARIFF REVISION AND TAFT WINNERS

IOWA REPUBLICANS INSTRUCT FOR SECRETARY OF WAR.

MR. ALLISON IS INDORSED

Cummins Followers Declare That They Forced the "Stand-Pat-ters" to Approve the Ohio Plank.

Des Moines, Ia., Mar. 19.—The Republican state convention Wednesday elected four delegates-at-large to the national convention, instructed them to vote for William H. Taft, endorsed Senator William E. Allison by a vote of 672 to 524, and approved the plank of the Ohio platform calling for a revision of the tariff at a special session of congress.

The Allison people dominated the convention from its opening to its close, and had things their own way throughout. The Cummins people, although defeated in the convention, took especial delight in having, as they declared, forced the "stand-patters" to endorse a plank calling for revision of the tariff, and they made a point of frequently reminding the Allison people of the fact.

Delegates Rap Allison. When the chairman of the committee on resolutions read the plank declaring that Senator Allison had served his party and his country well, a delegate from Polk, the home county of Cummins, interrupted with: "and the result railroads."

When the platform announced that the senator possessed strength for all emergencies, another member of the same delegation asked sarcastically: "Then why don't he use it?" The Allison men were as quick to retort as the Cummins men were ready to fire, and the witty sallies that passed from one side to the other set the convention in frequent roars of laughter irrespective of factional feeling. It was give and take, and both sides, although in deep earnest, were good natured.

It was generally expected before the final session of the convention that there would be a majority report on the tariff, and the Cummins men had prepared to make a strong fight for the adoption of the Ohio plank. When the committee was actually settled down to work, however, it was evident that the Allison people were determined to endorse the plank themselves, and the only fight that was made on the report of the committee on resolutions was against the endorsement of Senator Allison.

Address by Gen. Byers. The session was called to order by Frank P. Woods, chairman of the state central committee. He surrendered the gavel to Attorney General H. W. Byers of Harlan, the temporary chairman, who made an eloquent address which aroused the delegates to much enthusiasm. At the conclusion of Attorney General Byers' speech the result of the various district caucuses was reported. The permanent chairman was C. G. Samuels.

PLANS TO PROD CONGRESS

LABOR CONFERENCE DECIDES TO SEND A MEMORIAL.

National Legislators Are Accused of Neglecting the Interests and Demands of Organized Labor.

Washington, Mar. 19.—That a memorial formally protesting against the inaction of congress in the matter of legislation in the interest of organized labor and clearly setting forth its demands with respect thereto should be presented to the leaders of that body within a few days, was perhaps the most important action taken at Wednesday's sessions of the labor conference here.

This duty will devolve upon one of the two committees appointed by President Gompers, termed the "protest committee," which was directed to frame an address to be presented to those responsible for legislation in congress pointing out the failure of congress to enact needed legislation and setting forth the demands of labor on the subject. It was also decided to ask the leaders in congress to fix upon a time when a committee from the labor conference can confer with them. It is understood that the memorial will call attention to the recent injunction decisions of the supreme court against labor organizations and ask that the Sherman anti-trust law be so amended as to afford relief.

The committee on labor was authorized to draft a memorial to be sent to the members of the various labor organizations and the people generally, setting forth the prevailing conditions among workmen and calling attention to what organized labor demands at the hands of the federal government.

The conference, which is composed of representatives of the 117 national and international trade unions, or 27,000 local unions, is regarded as one of the most representative gatherings in the history of organized labor. Formal organization was effected by the election of President Gompers as permanent chairman and Frank Morrison as secretary.

GOV GUILD VERY ILL

Condition of Massachusetts Executive
Is Pronounced Critical.

Boston, Mar. 19.—It was announced Wednesday night that Gov. Curtis Guild, who has been ill for two weeks, is in a critical condition. His physician, Dr. Frederick B. Winslow, found the governor so seriously ill that it was decided to call two other physicians into consultation, and Dr. F. C. Shattuck and Elliott P. Joslin were summoned.

Gov. Guild's last public appearance was on the evening of March 3, when he delivered an address in Symphony hall, at which Secretary of War Taft was present. Soon afterward the governor was obliged to absent himself from the state house. His physician found that he was suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism and the grip. The grip greatly weakened him and his condition was further threatened by loss of sleep, due to severe rheumatic pains.

URGES MERCY FOR HARRY ORCHARD

JUDGE SENTENCES HIM, BUT RECOMMENDS COMMUTATION.

BELIEVES HIM TRUTHFUL

Murderer of Stoumenberg Thanks the Court and Weeps—Comment by Officer of Miners' Federation.

Caldwell, Idaho, Mar. 19.—Harry Orchard was sentenced to death Wednesday for the series of murders the confession of which shocked the world. But after all he may not pay the penalty which his confession in prison has not turned a hand to escape.

The court tempered justice with mercy by recommending commutation of the sentence and in doing so announced that it believed the story Orchard told and that the failure to convict the officers of the Western Federation of Miners did not prove their innocence.

Stating that he believed Orchard in his testimony in the trials of William D. Haywood and George A. Pettibone for the murder of ex-Gov. Frank Stoumenberg told the exact truth, attempting to conceal nothing, Judge Wood recommended that the state board of pardons commute Orchard's sentence of death to imprisonment in the penitentiary. The sentence of death was pronounced in accordance with the plea of guilty entered by Orchard Tuesday of last week, when he was arraigned.

Thinks Orchard Sincere. Judge Wood presided at both the Haywood and Pettibone trials. In sentencing Orchard and recommending the commutation of his sentence, he reviewed the case from the time of the killing of Frank Stoumenberg to the present.

"I am more than convinced that the defendant now at the bar of this court awaiting final sentence not only has acted in good faith in making the disclosures that he did, but testified fully and fairly to the whole truth, withholding nothing that was material and alleging nothing which had not actually taken place," said the court.

Orchard Thanks Judge. After reading his ruling Judge Wood formally sentenced Orchard and fixed May 15 as the date for the execution. Orchard asked for permission to speak and it was granted. He thanked the court for the review of the case given and for the kindly remarks in regard to him. He repeated that he had told the whole truth and that no promise of immunity or of money ever had been made to him. Before he had concluded tears were streaming from his eyes.

Federation Will Do Nothing. Denver, Col., Mar. 19.—Ernest Mills, acting secretary for the Western Federation of Miners, said Wednesday that the federation would remain passive in regard to the disposition to be made of Orchard's case.

"If Judge Wood made the statement credited to him," said Mr. Mills, "there is little doubt that he is paving the way for freedom for Orchard. It has been claimed all along that Orchard had been promised freedom by Gov. Gooding of Idaho for making the confession he made at the trials. That the political ring back of it has promised to go down the line for Orchard is also a well-known fact."

COAL FAMINE IS FEARED. Iowa Mines Close April 1 and Des Moines Is Worried.

Des Moines, Ia., Mar. 19.—Des Moines is facing a coal famine. On April 1 every mine in the state of Iowa will close down. Not a ton of coal will be mined. Just how long the mines will remain closed cannot be told now, but coal dealers believe that the shut-down will be for a month at the very least. Every mining company in this city is storing its coal now. Factories and large consumers of coal have prepared for the shut-down. Many of them have leased extra ground and for some time have been storing the coal.

Novel Weapon Described in Threats Against Chicagoans.

Chicago, Mar. 19.—Sensational letters threatening a novel and hideous form of assassination have been received lately by Mayor Huse, Chief of Police Shippy, and Assistant Chief Schuetzler.

A revolver, he said, had been constructed to shoot cartridges composed of steel points, samples of which were inclosed. The shooting would be noiseless and the steel points, the writer said, were dipped in deadly poison. CHICKENS ON THE FARM.

The average farmer is contented to let his hens produce for him between 75 and 125 eggs a year. With a little care and knowledge he can just as well secure from the same number of chickens an average of 200 eggs each per annum. This involves the careful breeding of hens and the protection and care of them. Roughly speaking, hens may be classified as follows:

In the Asiatic class, light Brahmas, buff and partridge Cochins and black Langshans.

In the Mediterranean class, black Minorcas and the leghorns, brown, white and buff.

In the American class, Plymouth Rocks (barred, buff and white), Wyandottes and Rhode Island reds. It was the barred Plymouth Rock which laid 251 eggs in a year at the Maine agricultural experiment station, and broke the world's record.

The Asiatic fowls make the best birds for eating, and they are prolific layers of dark brown eggs. They are good sitters and mothers, but how can you hope to make them pay if your market demands white eggs? How many people study the market end of the problem first?

The Mediterranean birds are the greatest layers, turning out large quantities of white shelled eggs, but they are not so good as table fowls. Neither do they stand the cold as well as do the American or Asiatic breeds, nor are they as good sitters or mothers.

All the pullets should have free range all summer. They will be much stronger and healthier than if confined to a yard. It goes without saying that the pullets must have a house all summer. About the last of September confine the pullets to their winter quarters. I prefer a house about 12 feet long, seven feet wide, seven feet high in front, the roof sloping so that the back is only four feet high. It may be shingled, but waterproof paper will answer very well. Such a house will cost about $25 but that will depend upon the price of lumber and labor in your locality.

A house of this size will hold comfortably 50 brooder chicks, 20 laying hens, or one male and a dozen breeding hens. The yard does not need to be large. In fact, a small yard is better than a large one, but there should be an endeavor to grow green stuff in it, the hens will eat most of it, and the top, three or four inches, should be occasionally renewed to avoid sickness among the flock.

For the best egg production feed the following ration, which is for one hundred hens. Early in the morning give four quarts of cracked or whole corn. Throw this in the litter on the floor. A three or four inch layer of litter should always be provided. The hunting for this will give the hens exercise. In the middle of the forenoon give them two quarts of corn and two quarts of oats. This will be enough for the regular daily feed, but always keep a quantity of the following dry mixture in the hen house in a receptacle which will keep, but still be easily accessible to the hens: Two parts wheat bran, one part corn meal, one part middlings, one part gluten meal or brewer's grains, one part linseed meal and one part beef scrap. There should also be other receptacles holding oyster shell, dry cracked bone, grit and charcoal.

Green food must also be provided a pack of green mangolds is enough for one day. Always provide clean water. If you have skim milk feed that also to the hens.

"HOW I SAVED MY BOY'S LIFE"

Eight-Year Old Son of Maine Man on Verge of Consumption

W. E. Morrell of North Berwick, Maine, says:

"My little boy had the whooping cough, which left him with a very bad bronchial trouble. Three doctors failed to do him any good at all. They thought he was going into consumption. He began to cough this winter just the same as before. We heard Father John's Medicine recommended highly, so decided to give it a trial and to my great delight I find it is doing wonders of good. Since we gave him the second bottle he has not had any cough at all, and he runs outdoors all of the time now, and is getting fat and rugged every day. (Signed) W. E. Morrell, Box 144, North Berwick, Me."
